DO FISHES SLEEP? (“Schlafen Fische?”)

by Jens Raschke & Jens Rasmus (Mixtvision, Germany. 64pp. 8+)

Jette's brother Emil has passed away. He isn't here anymore. Her mother hasn't stopped crying and Jette is painting clouds of anger. But the good times with Emil are always on her mind. She will always remember the holidays spent together and the day when Emil and her played funeral. Dramatist Jens Raschke tells the reader about Jette's endless questions about the purpose of life, grief, hope and a great love between siblings.

A touching, heartwarming story about grief - told in a hopeful, at times even humorous tone. Based on a wildly successful theater play of the same name that was staged in Germany, Mexico City, Stockholm, Poland, Hungary and Austria and translated in Swedish, Norwegian, Danish, Icelandic, Finnish, Arabic, Polish, Spanish, Hungarian, Russian, Estonian, and Romanian. The play was staged as a radio play in Germany. Both the play and the radio play have won numerous awards.

Spin-off of the internationally
successful TV series “Knietzsche”.

KNIETZSCHE AND THE POCKET ORACLE

(“Knietzsche und das Hosentaschen-Orakel”)

by Anja von Kampen (Mixtvision, Germany. 272pp. 10+)

Knietzsche has the worst birthday of all times: when he's turning twelve, he's told that he is adopted. All his biological parents have left him is a broken pocket watch, which suddenly comes to life ... As if that wasn't crazy enough, that same day, he meets Mildred. Her father is imprisoned on remand for allegedly stealing valuable paintings from the museum. Mildred is wildly determined to prove his innocence. Of course, Knietzsche and his friends Norbert, Pepe and Darina help her with it. Anja von Kampen writes a funny and sweeping mixture of a suspenseful crime story and fantastic adventure book, about truth, courage and one big mystery.

JARA'S JOURNEY (“Jaras Reise”) by Philipp Löhle & Pe Grigo
 (Mixtvision, Germany. Colour illustrated inside. 96pp. 8+)

Jaras best friend Frida moved from southern Germany to Berlin. Now Jara is supposed to wait for the next holidays to see Frida again. No way she can wait that long! So Jara sets out to walk to Berlin on her own. Luckily she doesn't stay alone for long. A story about a brave girl, real friendship and a journey between reality and fantasy at the crack of dawn.

THE CRAZY INVENTORS' HUT Series (“Der verrückte Erfinderschuppen”) by Lena Hach & Jens Daniela Kulot (Mixtvision, Germany. 164pp/title. 8+).
 Third title to follow in spring 2018

Award-winning author Lena Hach has created a fast-paced, side-splittingly funny story about three friends and their adventures as self-proclaimed inventors.

The lemonade fizzer (“Der Limonadensprudler”): Tilda, Walter and Fred have decided to become inventors. And their first invention seems to actually work: with the help of the genius lemonade fizzer (a high-performance fizzy tablet), simple tap water turns into delicious lemonade. But the fizzing power is stronger than expected: The roof of the inventors' hut lifts off and attracts the attention of the nasty neighbors - the Fat One and the Skinny One. And they have absolutely no appreciation for the little inventors ...

The looping twirler (“Der Looping-Dreher”): After what happened with the lemonade fizzer, Tilda, Walter and Fred have come to the conclusion: they have to find a new invention, instantly! Fred's Mum's new boyfriend is the right person to look to for pimping their ideas. But who could have foreseen that a spring and one drop of that miracle cleaning product would not only catapult Tilda's baby sister, but also Fred into the air ...

COMING UP FOR FRANKFURT

LIMBRADUR AND THE MAGIC OF GRAVITY
 (“Limbradur und die Magie der Schwerkraft”)
 by Volker Präkelt
 (Mixtvision, Germany. 160pp. 10+)

Why do apples fall to the ground? That's the simple opening question posed by famous physicist Isaac Newton. More than 300 years later, it is Albert Einstein who enabled us to take a new perspective on this question ... At night, 12-year-old Limbradur breaks into the renowned Albert Einstein Museum. There he meets Alby X3, a tiny, quirky science robot who explains Einstein's revolutionary ideas to him and takes him on a fantastic journey of discovery through space and time.

Based on a full-dome movie to be shown in planetariums around the world.

CATCHING A COLD FOR BEGINNERS
 (“Verkühl dich täglich”)
 by Melanie Laibl & Susanne Göhlich
 (Mixtvision, Germany. 80pp. 7+)

Pauli and his friends have a problem: wool season. It starts right after bathing trunks season and manifests itself through itching and scratching woolens on the hat, on the legs and around the neck. But not this year! This year the friends fight back and establish a club called "Catching a cold for beginners". They want to show the grown-ups that you don't need wooly stuff to brave the winter. Based (a little bit) on a true story.
